The scattering of an acoustic wave by an ensemble of many discrete objects is a phenomenon observed in many different contexts. In underwater acoustics, one finds examples in propagation through bubbly water, fish schools, non-homogeneous sediments (embedded shells for example), etc.