Willkommen bei Sammelpunkt. Elektronisch archivierte Theorie.

Sammelpunkt ist ein Online-Archiv für philosophische Texte. Es ist ein Projekt des Forschungsnetzwerks "Wissenschaftsphilosophie und Theorie der neuen Medien" am Institut für Philosophie der Universität Wien und wird von einem Editorenteam unter der Leitung von H. Hrachovec betreut.

Jeden Text ist ein Meta-Daten-Blatt vorangestellt, das die bibliographischen Daten enthält. Das erlaubt eine professionelle bibliographische Katalogisierung, die spezielle Suchmaschienen automatisch aus dem Archiv extrahieren und für Literaturrecherchen weiterverarbeiten können.

Sammelpunkt archiviert bereits veröffentlichte Texte sowie öffentlich gehaltene Vorträge. Sammelpunkt versteht sich als Online-Archiv, aber nicht als Online-Verlag und unterstützt den internationalen Standard der Open Archives Initiative (OAI).

This is the ELPUB Digital Library. ELPUB stands for ELectronic PUBlishing and the main goal of this conference platform is to bring together researchers, lecturers, librarians, developers, businessmen, entrepreneurs, managers, users and all those interested on issues regarding electronic publishing in widely differing contexts. These include the human, cultural, economic, social, technological, legal, commercial and other relevant aspects. Three distinguished features of this series of conferences are: broad scope of topics which creates a unique atmosphere of active exchange and learning about various aspects of electronic publishing, combination of general and technical tracks, and a condensed procedure of submission, review and publication of proceedings which guarantees presentations of most recent work. The e-papers are collected in this repository (browse by series).

The use of this Digital library is free of charge. Access to advanced features (article upload, creation of collections, discussion forums, ratings, reviews, etc.) is subject to user registration and login.

The ELPUB Digital Library is managed by Prof. Bob Martens. This application is demonstrating the SciX technology.

summary Journals as one of the most important information carriers are useful resources for libraries and information centers. As publishers more fully actualize the e-journal, it soon will be as insufficient to offer only print journals as it is to provide only print abstracts and indexes. Using journals especially scholarly journals, scientists can contact together in scientific communities. Impact of information technologies on journals has changed the format of these resources into electronic and has facilitated information storage and retrieval. Free e-journals are alternatives for non free e-journals and are useful for libraries that can not afford expensive costs to provide subscription-based e-journals. If libraries really support Free e-journals, then one would assume that we would be pretty aggressive about making free content readily available to our users through library systems and access points (e.g. LIS, knowledge base, web site). Finding free and non free e-journals in the web environment is more difficult than finding print journals, since they rarely are found in bibliographic resources, so their locating and retrieval is difficult. Librarians are responsible for information organization and retrieval and they must cooperate in designing search engines and web pages to offer electronic articles that are needed for users. Portals are one of the tools that can be used for accessibility of free and non free e-journals to users. Portals as website are windows to World Wide Web and often have a search engine, links to useful pages, news or other services. In this article various literature and experiences about access to electronic journals via web pages has been reviewed. We decided to create a special portal of free e-journals for postgraduate students, masters & researchers of Shahid Chamran Ahwaz University to use of these resources. So, we provided a list of Shahid Chamran Ahwaz University courses and on the basis of this list, we selected free e-journals of each course via Directory of Open Access Journals (DOAJ). DOAJ has become 'The Open Access journal site for libraries because it is of a manageable size. Many librarians may think it is comprehensive, it is well organized and easy to harvest. In this survey, Researcher could extract 198 journals from this website that all of them were peer reviewed. Since we wanted to design a portal for free e-journals, we added selected journals to webpage that was linked to Shahid Chamran Ahwaz University Central Library website. This webpage was called free e-journals portal. All students and Masters could access to their needed articles freely. In this article we will discuss about importance of open access or free e-journals and their role in scholarly communication. Finally we will offer free e-journals portal of Shahid Chamran Ahwaz University Central Library as a tool for access to open access articles.

Overall Concept

Living Reviews in European Governance is an entirely web-based, peer-reviewed journal, publishing reviews of research on core themes relating to European Governance. LREG is a joint enterprise by CONNEX (Connecting Excellence on European Governance) and NEWGOV (New Modes of Governance), two projects funded by the European Union within its Sixth Framework Programme of research.

The articles in LREG are solicited from specialists in their fields and are directed towards the scientific community at or above the graduate student level. The articles provide up-to-date critical reviews of the state of research in the fields they cover. They also offer annotated insights (and where possible, active links) into the key literature and describe online resources available in these fields. LREG is unique in maintaining a range of high-quality reviews and all articles are subjected to strict peer-review. In addition, the journal is offered as a free service to the scientific community. One of the most important features of LREG is that its articles are kept up to date by their authors. This is the significance of the word "Living" in the journal's title.

LREG is the third Living Reviews journal following Living Reviews in Solar Physics and Living Reviews in Relativity (see <http://www.livingreviews.org>) and it is the first in the social sciences.

It is central to the concept of LREG that it is a fully electronic journal. This means that articles can be updated regularly and with minimum effort. Besides its high-quality, searchable, easily navigable scientific content, the journal includes useful indexes of print and electronic resources. In this way, LREG can be used by its readers as a database, an encyclopaedia, or a research briefing, in addition to a review journal. The goal of the journal is to develop its articles into a carefully screened and edited, well-integrated, topical set of hypertext documents that, taken together, form a valuable research tool for scholars of European integration.

Living Reviews in European Governance is a service provided by a highly qualified Editorial Board, which consists of the Editor-in-Chief, the Technical Director and an appropriate number of Subject Editors. All members of the Editorial Board are participants in CONNEX or NEWGOV. An Editorial Office supports the work of the Editorial Board.

Library-specific problems regarding Open Access

- library and information science research lacks institutional framework in Austria
- library science is not regarded as science
- publishing and reading scholarly literature is not part of most job descriptions
- existence of several similar repositories, also in the german-speaking countries, is confusing (E-LIS, DOIS, Infodata eDepot, dLIST, Portal Informationswissenschaft...)

Conclusion: A question of credibility

We can't reasonably go out and evangelize self-archiving to faculty when we aren't doing it ourselves. We can't evangelize open-access journals when we don't publish in them. We can't evangelize open-access search engines and materials if we don't use them.
